Forensic Pathologist
Auckland, New Zealand

Locum or Permanent

Applications are welcome from qualified forensic pathologists to join the Dept. of Forensic Pathology which forms part of the Northern Forensic Pathology Service of New Zealand. The department is based in a complex tertiary laboratory at Auckland City Hospital.

This is a full-time position working alongside four other forensic pathologists. The department has NAME and ISO accreditation, and conducts accredited subspecialty training in forensic pathology. It also participates in the teaching and training of anatomical pathology registrars, as well as medical students from the adjacent University Of Auckland School Of Medicine, and other allied professional groups.

The department has a dedicated in-house CT scanner which is supported by experienced radiologists. Access to on-site cardiac genetic testing is available through our close relationship with the Cardiac Inherited Disease service.

Salary range is $337,818 to $489,214 (NZ) depending upon experience, and excluding additional benefits such as continuing medical education. Full-time workload is 250 post-mortems per year (full and external).

Applicants must have a primary medical qualification recognised by the New Zealand Medical Council and a postgraduate qualification such as FRCPA or equivalent e.g. DMJ or board-certified in forensic pathology, which allows vocational registration as a pathologist. Experience and a subspecialty interest are desirable but not essential. Applications from recently qualified forensic pathologists are welcome.

Starting date is negotiable.

Enquiries regarding a locum position are also be warmly welcomed.

Auckland is New Zealand’s largest city with a population of 1.5 million and in 2021 was named the world’s most liveable city. It is a vibrant, multi-cultural city with excellent opportunities to pursue outdoor interests and a rewarding lifestyle. A beautiful harbour and beaches allow a wide range of water sports and other activities.
